Although Ding Fire is associated with soft small fire, it does not mean that you are alike to a candle torch. There is more to yourself. But that depends on the degree of your affinity towards the day master itself.

Few questions that would be answered in this guide are:

What are your most basic personality traits?

What are you like in your career in your relationships and how do you deal with money?

What type of entrepreneur or businessperson are you likely to be?

What type of person are you in the workplace and how do you operate as a leader or manager?

What kind of friend or colleague are you?

There are many factors that possibly point out to a person’s character. Therefore it is safe to say that a Ding Fire person’s outlook towards life would be significantly different than others.
How Ding (丁) are you?

In BaZi the strength of the element plays a major part in determining your characteristics and destiny. Therefore apart from the Day Stem, the other three Stems and four Earthly Branches should also be taken into account to complete your chart. These parts are also responsible in deciding the strength of your Day Master.

If your Day Master is Ding Fire, you are likely to exhibit the characteristics below. If you are not, but you have Ding Fire in one or more Heavenly Stems, you might exhibit the characteristics in a lesser degree. It also depends on the context and situation as to whether you have the potential to exhibit these tendencies described below.

Ding Fire individuals are often discreet and elegant souls. You are not used to being loud and rough. You are poised, refined, elegant and charismatic. There is an air of gentleness around you. But once you are comfortable with others, you become the happiest and the life and soul of the event.

Ding Fire people are also very enigmatic and elegant, and therefore will not say anything until they are absolutely sure. They care about others and will go out of their way to make sure others get what they want.

Tips

If you make friends with a Ding Fire person, don’t judge them on your first impression. Get to know them and then deduce.

Worldly Views

Learners and thinkers

Ding Fire individuals love to spend time on intellectual issues. Therefore they can be over sensitive and contemplative when it comes to issues like above. They like to obtain new knowledge, regardless by books or by life experiences. They are constantly hungry for new information and enjoy taking in new ideas to be used in future.

You tend to be concise and meticulous, and are prone to leading the way and showing others the right path according to you.

Tips

Over thinking only leads to further problems. Keep calm and move on.
Unstable Emotions
Changes direction with the wind

Ding Fire people have the potential to be very fluid and easily disturbed. You can be happy one moment and sad the next. You can be poised and gentle at first, and all of a sudden can become angry and depressed the next minute. You don’t have consistency in showing your emotions, therefore it makes people feel harder to engage with you.

You tend to be super suspicious on others. To certain extent, you become insecure. This makes your relationships imbalanced.

Tips

Just as Disney’s Frozen goes, let it go. Don’t get tensed over everything. Things will fall into place when they need to.

Going Out of Their Way to Help

Give and take

You are extremely supportive and always there for your co-workers. Others find it easy to be dependent on you to get a work done, with a genuine intention. But this can be bad because you tend to go out of your way to help others. You neglect your wellbeing, and don’t always ask others for help.

Your manners and attitude helps you gain popularity in work. You are consistent and dependable, therefore your bosses don’t worry much about you.

Tips

As satisfying it is to help others, try not to go out of the way every time someone needs your help.

Grace Period Before Full Charge

Needs a kickstart

You don’t show your skills from the very start itself. Instead, you tend to wait it out before charging heads on. In the workplace, you may pass as a normal person with nothing spectacular. This does not mean you are good for nothing. You tend to wait for the right time to shine in the limelight.

When the time comes, people will be surprised and shocked at the amount of talent you have. Ding Fire individuals have a lot more talent and intelligence than declared.

Tips

Don’t be afraid or reluctant to show your capabilities. Remember, the fittest one survives.
Adhere to Rules

Do as I say

You tend to strictly follow rules and principles. You find it impossible to break rules, however tempting it may seem. You also tend to think your power come from the ability to keep to the rules. In that context, you don’t do much reasoning. Instead you have a blind leap of faith on the set of rules you follow from the start to the end.

You style of leadership heavily reflect the rules. If the rules that are imposed are strict, then Ding Fire leaders will also have a similarly severe style of management. If the rules are somewhat lax, then the Ding Fire leader will also be laidback and relaxed.

Tips

As a leader, your staffs’ wellbeing is also as important as the rules. Keep them in mind when you make decision.
Needs to be Appreciated

There is only Me in We

You care about others. Therefore you expect others to care about you. You need to be loved and cared deeply in your relationships, with most of the attention being on you. You constantly want to be pampered and nurtured, and this can cause discomfort among your friends and acquaintances. If you don’t get the desired attention, you can be very cranky and irritated.

As such, you can be found constantly whining and complaining about your issues and problems. You want to gain attention from others by igniting sympathy. This can cause people to go away from you.

Respect for Old People

Old is Gold

Ding Fire individuals have high respect for their elders. As you like to learn, old people are the epitome for knowledge and experience for you.

You can easily mingle and foster relationships with people older than you. At the workplace, you have an older mentor who helps you should you have doubts.

However, you lose your interest in helping any younger person to excel. You don’t want to be a mentor to others, especially by younger generation. It is not about the age though, but the mental maturity of those with whom they deal with.

Tips

As it does not do any good to dwell on problems and issues, you should do things that can take your mind off those problems; such as picking up hobbies and interests.

Tips

It is important that you treat everyone equally regardless of age. Through this, you gain respect from them.
Insecure
Stay off my radius

You tend to have difficult relationships because of your insecurities. Your insecurities can cloud your mind even after you fall into a serious relationship and start sharing your secrets and thoughts comfortably with your partner. You believe that there is nothing likeable about you. Therefore forming a true friendship is hard for you because you are in a constant battle as to why people would want to like you. You are suspicious of people's intention of friending you, hence you may ignore all their good intentions towards you because you are too busy being mistrustful.

Tips
Big or small, there is a difference only you can make. Embrace that and trust your friends’ intentions on being with you.
Money Matters
You need to know what you are putting yourself into. Therefore, always be informed of the developments in your ventures.

Tips

Needs Supervision

‘I’ll do whatever you say’

You place a lot of value on professional expertise and consultation, especially in finance. You want to be told what to do. If possible, you will avoid the technical part of money management.

In finance, it would do well if you let others with more experience to handle the tedious matters. For that reason, you can easily succumb to loss in money matters.

This is because you trust someone wholly if you feel you can trust his or her methods of financial planning, not considering the person’s character. The advices may seem professional, but may be more than what meets the eye. This can be quite dangerous and costly as too many cook spoil the broth.

Concrete Information

‘Show me the numbers’

You tend to place a high standard on expert analysis. As such, you want to trust professional advice and expertise, but you will only surrender their beliefs to a professional financial manager or consultant once you are fully sure of their methods. In other words, you believe in ‘facts and figures.’ You need to have proper methods to follow.

Hence, you have the utmost respect and regard for financial analysis with facts, proofs, and numbers. Even if you are not familiar with the technicalities, you will appreciate its value and are more likely to use it for your own projects.
